We did not imagine for an instant that there was a word of truth in this absurd and foaming charge; we know that there sould not be. But the fullest proof of its tter mendacity is on hand. Mr. John Q. Adams, the Democratic andidate for Governor of Massachusetts was, until within a brief period, one of the He adhered to the Republican party as long as he could consistently with his own convictions of right and wrong. We find in the Boston Post his letter accepting the nomination for the Governorship. I is calm, thoughtful, sound, wise, and able. All Boston and the population of the surrounding country are expecting to be in the streets to-day to catch a glimpse of the hero of the Shenandoah Valley. The enthusiasm has been increasing with the expectation of his coming, until it is now at fever heat. The welcome will be a popular one. It is the people who are coming out to do honor to a brilliant Captain. There should be nothing of politics in such a reception. For numerous reasons, we are sorry to be compelled to inform our neighbor that every State of the North, except glorious little Delaware, has already ratified the pending amendment, which only waits the mock ratifact that the kentucky Democracy as the Northern Democracy, now exulting in victory, rejoiced as heartily over the late brilliant triumphs of the Kentucky Democracy as the Northern Democracy, now exulting in victory, rejoiced as heartily over the late brilliant triumphs of the Kentucky Democracy as the Northern Democracy, now exulting in victory, rejoiced as heartily over the late brilliant triumphs of the Kentucky Democracy as the Northern Democracy, and the Northern Democracy in the great fact that there must be everything in common between the Kentucky Democracy and the Northern Democracy, it certainly seems to us that there must be everything in common between the Kentucky Democracy and the Northern Democracy, it certainly seems to us that there must be everything in common between them, if we may judge from the great fact that the whole of the Northern Democracy, now excluding in victory, rejoiced as heartily over the late brilliant triumphs of the Kentucky Democracy as the Northern Democracy. It certainly seems to us that there must be everything in common between the Kentucky Democracy and the Northern Democracy in the Northern Democracy in the power of all of the Church, and only in a secondary sense derived from the constitution; and that constitution is the sense of the Northern Democracy. It certainly seems to us that there must be everything in common between the Northern Democracy, in the power of all of the Rorthern Democracy, now excluding in the Northern Democracy in the Scattering in the Northern Democracy in the Scattering in the Northern Democracy in the Scattering in the Northern Democracy in the Northern Democracy in the Northern Democracy in the Northern Democracy in the Northern islatures in the South to be proclaimed a voted upon. The members of the Democratic Central Committee say that their first suspicion of aught connected with or bearing equally shameful ignorance of law and ogic and literature and history and finance and ethics and grammar of which we have repeatedly convicted him, he is behind the age, if not behind the race itself. He is certainly the emptiest coach on the road. And he is as slow as he is empty. He knows but little, and he doesn't

The Editor of the Democrat says hat he cannot think of the doings of the Democratic Central Committee without a blush. He hasn't blood enough in his ody to blush adequately for himself. He ought to get the entire dozen of the mempers of his party to pump up all the arteral and venous blood of their frames to aid him. If they were to do the subject full justice, the galaxy of their countenances would shine afar like a conflagration.

JOURNALISTIC SOMERYAULTING. — Sarprise has been expressed in some quarters that the Louisville Journal from being a stanch Union paper became a Confederate organ, and now going another step forward urges armed revolution against the constitutional authorities of the land. This advance backward is, however, easily explained. Since the termination of hostilities a son of Mr. Prentice who served under the stars and bars, together with a nother rebel officer, have been admitted into the Journal constitutions or Wednesday.

General Sheridan is notoriously indebted for the honors, if such they are, which the radicals so profusely bestow upon him, almost entirely to the fact that he forced the most odious and obnoxious measures in his power upon the people of the South during his domination in Louisiana and Texas, practised a despotism unpractised compensation, saying not one word about "God the King and Ruler," as he makes himself known to the State in the natural order, and to man as his creature, "show-Democracy throughout the whole nation rom New York to California. DRESS OF MR. RICARDI.

The Italian Brotherhood of Louisville naving adopted the anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columous as their national holiday, the event was celebrated by them on Saturday last for the first time. The appropriate manner in which this great occasion was commemorated entitles our Italian populace to lasting credit. They entered into the celebration with a spirit of thorough appreciation of the exalted character of Columbus, and of the beneficent results of labor his memorable achievement to the scienhis memorable achievement to the scientific world, and its untold blessings to the whole human family.

In pursuance of the prearranged order, the Italian society, numbering about sixty members, appeared upon our streets in the forenoon, preceded by a band of music, and handsomely dressed in black, with their regalias of crimson bearing the cross insignia of Italy. The beautiful flag of the society, and the national banners of Italy and America, fluttered side by side in front of the procession, typifying the affectionate sentiment cherished by the sons of Italia for the free land of their adoption. Jacob Zanone, the oldest Italian resident of Louisville, was most happily chosen as chief marshal, the duties of which station he performed to the undivided pleasure and duties of which station he performed to the undivided pleasure and to the undivided pleasure and the college of every celebrant. After the department of the college of the parading the principal streets the society marched out to the Lion Garden, on Preston street, where a good part of the afterduty of Italians of the present day, continued Mr. B., to defend with the sword the cross of their native land as the emblem of liberty—the representative not of a religious idea but of the inalienable and inviolable right of free State and free Church. He deprecated the agitations which had kept Italy so long divided, and fervently hoped that all dissensions would soon cease, and that his sunny land might come out of the storm peaceful, united, and free. This sentiment evoked frequent and hearty "vivas." Mr. Ricardi closed his eloquent speech by exhorting his fellow-countrymen to think, act, and pray for the unity of Italy and its perpetual disenthrallment from the unhappy fate into which ambitious kings had plunged In all respects, this celebration honored alike its illustrious object and those who devised and participated in it. We exercises, and imparted a significance to re derstood. We congratulate the Italian Brotherhood and its friends upon the introduction of a custom which has been Americans and Italians. Indeed, we hold the opinion that the anniversary of Columbus's discovery of this continent should not be merely observed as a national episode, but should have universal commemoration. WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.

Mr. Clark Chief of the Printing Participants.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.
Mr., Clark, Chief of the Printing Bu-eau of the Treasury, to-day presented to secretary McCulloch, a detached official report in reserve to the counterfeit seven-thirty notes. He says that all the notes thus far presented are of the denomination of one thousand dollars, and dated June 15th, 1865, and bear the check letter A or B, and none of them are marked with C or D check letters, so far as has yet been discovered. He thinks it not improbable that such may have been all that are put in circulation.

The detailed differences are—first. In the counterfeit the seal is one-sixteenth of an inch larger than in the genuine, and that this difference in size is due to points alone, the counterfeit points being larger than in the genuine. The central portions of the seal are the same size both in the genuine and counterfeit.

The ink of the counterfeit numbers differ in shape, particularly in the figure 4, and are printed with different ink. The genuine ink has a metallic luster, while the counterfeit is leaden, and the third cenunterfeit is leaden, and the third cen one lok has a metallic luster, while the counterfeit is leaden, and the third central vignette and expression of the face, in the counterfeit, of a female figure is very different from the genuine, as the eyes are large and more open.

Third—In the central 'vignette the expression of face in counterfeit female figure is very different from the genuine, as the eyes are larger and neck narrower than in the original. Convolution lines forming at the right of the female figure are more flattened in their curves in the counterfeit than they are in the original one, and clouding used on the figure is slight and indistinct in the counterfeit, making a space between the figure, and the words Treasury Department are lighter in the counterfeit than in the original. The letters forming the word pluribus on the shield at the left hand figure are well defined in the original but in the counterfeit they are irregular and confused, and the lines do not form perfect letters. There are many other minute points of difference in the central vignette, particularly in drathan they are in the original, and the ciphers are more oblong in the counterfeit than in the genuine. In green tint counter one thousand round; spur at left foot; figure one on genuine notes cuts into heart-shaped center lathe work, while the counterfeit is entirely clear of it.

Sixth—In the first letter, in the Treasurer's signature, crossing ends of the hair lines in the upper and lower portions of the letter F, in original form is a small triangular space of white, and this white space is wanting in the counterfeit. In the genuine note there is a well defined cross line on top of the capital U, in the word United, under the Treasurer's signature, but in the counterfeit there is only a faint line connecting the tops of the letter. There are many other points different not necessary to detail, as those above recited will lead any expert to detect them.
